THE BENT OF TAU BETA PI

is the official quarterly publication of The Tau Beta Pi Association, Inc., the engineering honor society and the world's largest engineering organization. It provides its members with information both on Tau Beta Pi and topics of vital interest to the engineering community at large. THE BENT is edited for senior-level undergraduate and graduate engineering students, practicing engineers, and executives in all engineering fields. Circulation includes direct mail to approximately 88,000 Tau Beta Pi members, plus engineering deans and faculty in 234 colleges and universities. All paid subscribers are members of Tau Beta Pi and, therefore, ranked at least in the upper 20 percent of their graduating classes scholastically. If your intent is to recruit top technical talent, THE BENT is the medium that you will want to include in your plans. THE BENT won two national design awards recently.

Our History

The Association was founded in 1885 at Lehigh University, by Dr. Edward H. Williams Jr. to offer engineering students the same chance for recognition that another honor society gave to students in liberal arts.

Tau Beta Pi has grown steadily since its founding, and there are now collegiate chapters at 234 U.S. colleges and universities, active alumnus chapters in 16 regions across the United States, and a total initiated membership of 506,000. Tau Beta Pi has been a dynamic integral part of the engineering profession for more than a century. It takes pride in its commitment to the development of engineers of exemplary character so that they will be leaders both on their campuses and in the rapidly changing world of technology for the betterment of society.

Tau Beta Pi Core Messages

Tau Beta Pi:

- is the only national/international honor society representing the entire engineering profession;
- provides lifelong opportunities for membership, service, networking, recognition, and other benefits;
- provides professional management experience, training, scholarships, fellowships, and social opportunities for members;
- enlightens its members through participation in community activities and socially responsible service to others; and
- members are influential contributors to their institutions, businesses, communities, and to the public's awareness of the contributions of the engineering profession to society.

Awards and Honors

The Fellowship Program, adopted in 1928, has awarded 911 advanced-study grants totaling $4,975,000. Established in 1998, the Scholarship Program has awarded scholarships of $2,000 to 858 senior engineering students ($1,716,000). Every fall, six college freshmen are awarded $1,000 scholarships by the Association.

Up to five Tau Beta Pi Laureates are named annually to outstanding undergraduates who have made significant contributions in the areas of the arts, athletics, campus leadership, and community service.

Our Distinguished Authors

The following partial listing represents some of the leading authorities in industry and academia who have contributed their expertise in featured articles in recent issues: Dr. Martin E. Hellman, professor emeritus, Stanford University; Stephen D. Bechtel Jr., P.E., chairman emeritus, Bechtel Group, Inc.; Dr. Stuart G. Walesh, P.E., independent consultant; Dr. Mary L. Good, former undersecretary, U.S. Department of Commerce; Dr. Steven B. Sample, P.E., president, Univ. of Southern California; Dr. Henry Petroski, P.E., professor, Duke Univ.; Dr. William E. Wulf, former president of National Academy of Engineering; Wilson Greatbatch, P.E., inventor; Dr. Robert E. Uhrig, P.E., distinguished scientist emeritus of Oak Ridge National Laboratory, and Samuel C. Florman, P.E., co-chairman of Kreisler Borg Florman Construction Company.
